STRONG MEN AT THE HEAD.

Iron Ore in giving the news item of the consolidation of the Greene Consolidated and Cananea Central interests at Cananea has this to say of the men who are at the head of what is acknowledged to be one of the greatest copper enterprises in the world:

"Mr. T. F. Cole, of Duluth, has been selected for the presidency of the new company. This is one first occasion where this gentleman would consent to accept the head of any of the several copper mining organizations in which he has taken so important a part as organizer and director. That he has accepted the duties of the position proves that he looks upon the company as possessing great merit. Quite naturally, in view of his past performances in the mining world, he would desire to take the head of a concern that was to be of great prominence. That he has accepted the responsibility is a good thing for the shareholders of the company, as he will bend every energy in making a name for the organization that will reflect credit upon himself and all those with whom he is associated. Those who know Mr. Cole need no assurance that his presence as the head of a great mining organization will be of incalculable benefit to the latter. He brings to a new company a rare experience coupled with wonderful force and skill, a combination that will be accompanied by success. He has given the Greene Consolidated mines a very careful inspection and there is no better judge of a mining proposition. That he has engaged in this enterprise is assurance to the many who know him that there will be busy days ahead and the dividends that have always followed his leadership. "It has long been known that Greene had immense deposits of copper ore, and that there were few mines anywhere presenting such showings as were here to be seen, but there has been a belief that the most was not being obtained from the much nature had bestowed. There are few people who understood all that had to be contended with and overcome in the Greene field.

"People are prone to find fault. We believe Col. Greene did a great work in the opening of the Greene mines in a new field and one in which there were more things to hinder than were ever printed or understood. He has been making gradual improvement all along the line, has surrounded himself with good men, and was just beginning to get returns from his many years of hard effort.

"It was quite natural that he would like to gain the assistance of such men as T. F. Cole and John D. Ryan. That he finally has brought them into his organization speaks well for his keenness. That he was desirous of surrendering the presidency of the Greene Consolidated company to give place to Mr. Cole, is not to be wondered at. Col. Greene will take great pleasure in seeing as vice president and doing much that he can towards assisting in forwarding the interests of the new organization.

"Col. Greene has long been held in high esteem by the leading Mexicans who recognized the fact that he was doing a wonderful work in the opening of his mines and in calling the attention of capital to the mineral lands of their country. To the United States Diaz and his followers looked for the money that was necessary in making their country valuable. Americans were particularly desired because they possessed the force and spirit that accomplished results in a short time. Speaking the Spanish language like a native, and honestly performing every agreement into which he entered, the colonel soon won the confidence and esteem of the Mexican government, the result being that he secured concessions which were of great worth.

"Within the past few days Colonel Greene has been granted the exclusive privilege by the Mexican government of examining forty miles of lands south of Cananea, and to make such selections from it as he saw fit. "What better evidence could one require showing the faith the Mexican government imposes in him. Imagine the United States giving such a privilege to any of its citizens. It is indicative of the diplomatic genius of Col. Greene and shows that he is a very valuable member of the new company, and that as vice president he will accomplish much for the good of the shareholders.

"We have personally met Colonel Greene and know him to be a most courteous gentleman and one possessing a fine equipment for the position he occupies."

DEATH FROM EATING.

A prominent eastern physician lecturing on "eating" declares that thousands of people regularly and almost systematically poison themselves with food. This physician says that eating is one of the most important things in life, and yet it is given the least concern. The average man exercises more concern in selecting a necktie than in selecting a meal. The palate is the only guide in most cases and few ever stop to realize how grossly the palate may be corrupted and how far it may lead us astray. If a man were to conduct his business as he conducts his eating, devoting himself only to the things he likes, he would end in bankruptcy just as surely as thousands now end in indigestion. Some starve themselves, but the great majority go to the other extreme and constantly overeat. The stomach is the sturdiest organ in the body, but it cannot carry the loads most people put upon it.

Men who have fine horses and even dogs find it worth while to observe the principles of proper feeding. Animals represent money, and so command concern. The man who would overfeed, or underfeed, or improperly feed in any way a valuable horse would be looked upon as a fool and would gain the scorn of the society for the protection of cruelty to animals. But a man who misfeeds himself, and no doubt many of us may thus destroy the most valuable of all his possessions—his health—will never think of his loss until too late.

Proper eating—provided there is enough to eat—would be the simplest problem with which men have to deal if they would but apply as much sense to themselves as they do to horses and dogs.

MANUAL TRAINING FOR REFORM SCHOOL.

The Federation of Woman's clubs in Arizona has taken up the matter of securing from the next legislature an appropriation for the purpose of adding a manual training department to the territorial reform school at Benson. This work has been undertaken by the ladies of the federation, according to our understanding, at the request of Governor Kibbey.

Arizona has made a reputation in the past for being ever ready to take a step forward whenever the opportunity offered itself and this request which will be made of the legislature will afford the opportunity to take a mastodon stride in the matter of giving the reform school at Benson every necessary equipment required for adding manual training to its present work.

This institution should be the pride of us. Such a line would soon bring other lines of railroad from the east.

Says the Arizona Republican: "A jury at Globe recently mistook itself for a referee of a duel. Two foreigners had engaged by agreement in what was meant to be mortal combat. One of them was tried on a charge of having fought a duel. The evidence supported the charge. In fact there was no doubt about the duel and its participants. The jury took no account of the alleged crime, but inquired into the fairness of the encounter and decided that it was conducted according to the code. The defendant was therefore held blameless. Without juries we would have a hard time getting along in this world."

The proposition to have a manual training department established in connection with the industrial school at Benson should commend itself to every newspaper in the territory. The boys sent to the industrial school should be learned a trade, no when they leave the school they would be equipped to make useful citizens.

The rumor is still going around New York state that Senator Tom Platt will resign from the senate early in the spring. New York will have time to choose his successor after Platt hands in his "skiddoo" papers.

From all sections of the territory the reports come in of unusual prosperity. All industries are sharing in the good times. The present holiday season finds the people in a happy mood and enjoying health and a glorious climate.

The supply of oil and coal for fuel at the big smelters at Douglas is at a dangerously low stage, but so far the stream of copper has not been diminished. It is the hope of all that the smelters will not be compelled to shut down.

Those who have no other way of electing favorite candidates but by betting on them before the voting begins would do well to retire from politics.

The news from Sonora is still of the kind which presages a boom in that rich mineral country.

The postmasters have been kept pretty busy by Santa Claus during the past week and have had but little time to read the postal cards.

If the reports from Cuba concerning the attempt of Japan to stir up revolution in the island possessions is true it will not be long until Uncle Sam will have the Mikado across his knee.

Christmas morning
Lots of noise,
Kids excited,
Over toys,
Mamma happy,
Grandma too,
Papa smiling,
Quite a few.

Christmas evening
Same old same,
Toys all broken,
House looks lame;
Poor kids sobbing
On their bed,
Grandma rubbing
Where they're red;
Mamma trying
Hard to cry,
Wishing she could
Only die;
Papa walking
Can't sit still Looks as though he'd
Like to kill;
Goes in bedroom
Slams the door,
Fifteen minutes
Heavy snore.

Water boiling
Cup of tea,
Every other Word is "He"
Clock on mantel
Says, Cuckoo.
Christmas Nineteen
